ON A LEANDER GEM WHICH A YOUNG LADY GAVE
THE AUTHOR

John Keats

Keats, John (1795-1821) - Widely regarded as the most talented of the English romantic poets, Keats, whose work was poorly received during his lifetime, could not have foreseen his later recognition. Ironically, he wrote for his own epitaph: "Here lies one whose name was writ in water." On a Leander Gem Which a Young Lady Gave the Author (1817) - Opening lines: Come hither all sweet maidens soberly, / Down-looking, aye, and with a chasten'd light ...

ON A LEANDER GEM

Come hither all sweet maidens soberly,
Down-looking, aye, and with a chasten'd light
Hid in the fringes of your eyelids white,
And meekly let your fair hands joined be,
As if so gentle that ye could not see,
Untouch'd, a victim of your beauty bright
Sinking away to his young spirit's night,
Sinking bewilder'd 'mid the dreary sea:
'Tis young Leander toiling to his death;
Nigh swooning, he doth purse his weary lips
For Hero's cheek, and smiles against her smile.
O horrid dream! see how his body dips
Dead-heavy; arms and shoulders gleam awhile:
He's gone: up bubbles all his amorous breath!
